7 Натисніть на поле "Country" та виберіть свою країну з випадаючого списку

The screenshot shows a registration form for TestRail. The form is divided into two columns. The left column contains fields for 'First Name' (with 'Test' entered), 'Work Email' (with 'tt7946652@gmail.com' entered), 'Company name' (with 'GoIT' entered), and 'How many users do you expect to access TestRail?' (a dropdown menu). The right column contains fields for 'Last Name' (with 'Tester' entered), 'Phone Number' (with 'Optional' entered), and 'Country' (a dropdown menu with 'Ukraine' selected). An orange circle highlights the 'Country' dropdown. Below the form, there is a paragraph of text: 'After signing up, we will instantly create a new TestRail Cloud account for you on our servers. Already have a TestRail account you want to use? Please contact us.' At the bottom, there is a 'Web Address' field with a placeholder 'Choose a name' and a '.testrail.io' domain suggestion button.

☒ Use a single repository for all cases (recommended)

A single test suite (repository) is easy to manage and flexible enough for most projects with no or few concurrent versions. You can use sections and subsections to further organize your test cases.

☐ Use a single repository with baseline support

Use a single test suite (repository) with the additional option to create baselines to manage multiple branches of your test cases at the same time. This is ideal if you need to test multiple project versions in parallel.

☐ Use multiple test suites to manage cases

Multiple test suites can be useful to organize your test cases by functional areas and application modules on the test suite level. This is the traditional mode of TestRail and is automatically used for upgraded projects.
